

No More Dodos
in Soho Art Event at the
Vegan Hippo

An appreciative crowd turned up to the Vegan Hippo (a delightful vegan cafe in Soho) for an Art Evening. Featuring prints of Geoff's animal paintings, a talk from Geoff about his 45 years as a vegan (with plenty of anecdotal detours through his varied and fascinating career) plus seven songs from singer/songwriter Tally Spear. And lashings of delicious vegan food and drink, courtesy of the Vegan Hippo.

We had a range of books, t-shirts, CDs and posters for sale in aid of No More Dodos, and received plenty of feedback from guests who had been inspired by the evening.

Photos show Geoff in various stages of flow, Tally Spear in performance, Geoff in conversation with actress Carol Royle, the food and the team at Vegan Hippo, plus invited guests.

Plans are afoot to organise more evenings with special guests - if you'd like to be on the invite list, please email Geoff.

The very next day, the Vegan Hippo was blessed with a visit by a group of Tibetan Monks, who were able to enjoy the food and the artwork. They must have heard...

VEGAN HIPPO

Do pay a visit to our friends at the Vegan Hippo when you're in London. The food is amazing and the staff could not be more enthusiastic and obliging. We cannot thank them enough for their wholehearted support - with particular mention for Gosia, her vision and dedication.

Geoff says it's a wonderful place to connect with people who care. Try it and you may well be amazed at what transpires.
